SESQUICENTENNIAL FARM

FOUNDED IN 1867

Several members of the Kebler family of Grand Ledge were on hand recently to celebrate their family farm's official certification as a Michigan Sesquicentennial Farm. The 120-acre farm, which produces hay, corn, beans and wheat, has been in the family since 1867, when it was founded by Frederic Richard. Today, the farm is owned by Frederic's great-grandson, James Kebler, and his sister-in-law, Jane Kebler, widow of James' deceased brother, Jeff. In the photo above, James and Jane are shown holding their farm's certification signs. They are surrounded by family members (l-r) Jarrod, Jenny, Daniel, Justin, Kyle, Braylin and Geneva. Missing from the photo are close family members Missy, Angela, Brandon, Kassey, Alyssa and Wayne.